erial of Reapers and Mowers took place sterday on the farm of Mr. L. Dorsey. The machines entered for competition were Aultman's Mower, Allan's Mower, Atkin's Self-Raker (combined), The New York Reaper (combined), and the Kentucky Harvester (combined). Hunter's Mower (N. Y.) broke down, and was withdrawn. The first trial was a field of clover, about two acres, in which the clover being thick, tangled and fallen, single machines appeared to work to better advantage than the combined.

After a rich and bounteous repast, spread by r. Dorsey, at which the cheer was served up me Kentucky style, the party adjourned to of timothy. Here it was that the commachines worked to greater advantage Le single ones, though all of them workutiful style, to the satisfaction of the and the observers.

MILTON, Kv., June 30th, 1858. Mesars. EDITORS: Yesterday the body of Mr. William Conway, aged 23 years, son of James Conway, residing about three miles from this place, on the Bedford road, was found in the woods lifeless. I will relate some circumstances in reference to this matter, as I have heard them. It seems that on Thursday of last week William Conway stated to his mother that he was going out that afternoon to settle a little deficulty he had had with a young Roberts H about a young lady, both living in the neighborhood. As there was company at his father's house, he asked his mother what room he should occupy when he came home, for he expected to come home late at night, and did not wish to disturb the visitors. His mother told him, and he went off. He did not return that night, nor for several nights, and finally the wish to disturb the visitors. His mother told thim, and he went off. He did not return that hight, nor for several nights, and finally the him of the visit some ferings with this stand and the probably he had taken a notion to visit some friends with whom he had been corresponding, and quieted their feelings with this sthought. But finally they hecame to anxious about him that they commenced a search for him, and yesterday he was found in the woods dead. His wounds gave evidence that he had been shot in the body. He was bying by a log, with his feet and legs langing across the log, which reemed to prove that he had been killed instantiv. When he left home he had from three to five hundred dollars and a watch upon his person, and I understand when he was found these were all gone.

There are tumors connecting respectable persons with this said affair; but tuttle like the product of the dournal about the raphisery of the latter in favor of the eight of search. While the Journal about the raphisery of the latter in favor of the eight of search. While the Journal ama was swesting over a three column article in deleuse of Join Bull, John backed down and left his friend George light and dry upon that musty old abstraction, the "Right of Search." The Democrat insists that John bracked George Badly, and is evidently trying to bring about a person-cart insists that John bracked George Badly, and is evidently trying to bring about a person-cart insists that John bracked George Badly, and is evidently trying to bring about a person-cart insists that John bracked George badly, and is evidently between the two powers. There is little danger, however. They have been old friends too long to quarrel now. John Bull may relinquish the right of search, but the editor of the Journal never will. The right and necessity of search is associated with the cartiest ideas, e.e., that filled his youthful head. He had early license for the doctune which, comb-bined with his present hostility to the administration, makes him firm in his opi
